As Spring quarter of 1992 got underway, Fuller students, particularly in the School of Psychology, began to hear the name John G. Finch with increasing regularity. Finch became more than a name on the Psychology building after the disclosure of charges of sexual misconduct. Information about the investigation by the State of Washington elicited strong reactions from the Fuller Community. By the end of the quarter, students also learned of Finch’s pressure upon a Fuller student to engage in nude therapy in 1986, which she declined to do.

John Finch is introduced in the Fuller catalog as “a psychologist from Tacoma, Washington whose inspiration and efforts led to the establishment of the School of Psychology at Fuller Theological Seminary.” He gained prominence at Fuller through both the John G. Finch Symposium on Psychology and Religion and Intensive Therapy in which Fuller students and faculty participated.

As news of the charges against John Finch spread, the impact on Fuller students was dramatic. The Psychology Graduate Union scheduled individual meetings as well as several forums. Students presented questions to Dean Hart and President Hubbard regarding administrative actions in the matter. At issue was student concern that Administration had not taken seriously the complaints by the student in 1986 against John Finch for his pressure on her to engage in nude therapy. Students and other members of the community expressed feelings and offered suggestions for healing and restoration of the Fuller community. A small group met weekly throughout the summer to pray.

On July 24, John Finch was charged by the Washington State Department of Health with “having sexual contact with patients, providing therapy that was unnecessary, incompetent, and harmful; and with unprofessional conduct.” His license was revoked for a minimum of 20 years. Finch was ordered to reimburse several clients for therapy, as well as paying a fine of $41,000. Several former clients are in the process of taking personal legal action against him. The full report by the Washington State Department of Health is available in the PGU office.

During the summer the Board of Trustees appointed a Task Force for the purpose of investigating the Finch issue. This commission is composed of Trustees John Ortberg (Chairperson), Clifford Penner and Larry Langdon; Faculty members Libbie Patterson and Nancey Murphy; and PGU Co-Presidents, Jonathon Hartiens and Debbie Payne. Primary questions addressed were: To what extent were Fuller students and alumni directly affected by John Finch? What information did the administration have regarding John Finch’s behavior? Did they respond in an adequate and timely manner? Was there collusion or attempted cover-up involved? Was there inappropriate influence due to financial support? What steps should be taken toward healing and restoration? This commission met over 30 hours interviewing various persons and reviewing information. Many additional hours were spent in individual inquiry and follow-up.

A report including findings and recommendations was submitted to the Executive Committee of the Board and will be presented to the entire Board of Trustees when they convene this week. The Task Force has suggested a day of healing and restoration in November in conjunction with other recommendations to be announced following the Trustee meeting.

On Tuesday, October 20, students, staff, faculty, administration and Chairperson of the Board, Sam Reeves participated in a Chapel in Travis Auditorium to pray for wisdom and healing as the process continues. Members of the Task Force, as well as Drs. Hart and Hubbard continue to welcome dialogue with persons who have concerns and recommendations for restoration.
Bill Dymess, Dean of the School of Theology, shares a vision to see a greater partnership and connection between Fuller and the Pasadena community. He strongly believes in the enormous potential to extend our vision of ministry to include the Pasadena and the Greater Los Angeles areas. Such hands-on experiences cannot help but affect our theology and enlarge our understanding of the gospel message.

As a response to this vision, the School of Theology Dean’s Office and the Theology Graduate Union have hosted van tours with Joe Colletti, a Fuller Adjunct and Director of Lutheran Social Services. Students who are interested in learning more about ministry opportunities in the community have found that the van tours have given them a better understanding of the urban situation right outside Fuller’s doorstep. The tours also act as a catalyst to break down the hurdles which inhibit us from taking that first step to get in touch with the community, especially those who are marginalized—the invisible people.

The idea for the van tour came about as a reaction to the desperate plight of our cities and consequently our desire to help students connect with the community surrounding them. I know that it is difficult for a student balancing studies, work, internships, and family to make time to learn about and participate in the community. In light of this fact, events such as the van tour facilitate the process by exposing students to the different opportunities available.

The response we have received from the students has been tremendous. We visited places such as the Union Station, Pasadena Urban League, and the All Saints AIDS Service. Students describe the event as an eye-opening and enriching experience. Some of them have commented:

“...it opened up an awareness of needs in general which in turn gives me a better picture to see the need to be more involved...It was informative to go to the Union Station to see the services provided for the homeless people. Myths were dispelled about the homeless population such as homeless people being transients.”
—Jenise Rutherford

“The van tour was very helpful. Coming from London, I was interested to see what sort of area Pasadena is and the opportunities for ministry. The All Saints AIDS Center in particular impacted me as I became more aware of the growing number of children and families affected with AIDS. I would recommend other people to go on a van tour. It’s important for people to know the issues going on and how it relates to our developing desire to serve.”
—Ray Carter

The van tour is but one of the steps in our process of plugging and gaining feet-wetting experiences. We hope that our efforts to connect are not merely reactionary but progressive steps to integrate Fuller with our community.

Another opportunity to connect with the community is forthcoming. Joe Colletti is in the process of organizing a group of Fuller students to help with the Pasadena Bad Weather Shelter, a consortium of Pasadena churches who open up their doors to house the homeless. Dining With Dan
BY DAN PAYNE

BULLOCKS RESTAURANT  1/2 OUT OF FIVE

My money was so tight last week that it squeaked when I took it out of my pocket. Since I’ve taken the position of reviewing restaurants there has been a constant shrinkage of the tiny rags that others refer to as my clothing. So, I’ve made amends to try and eat in a more healthy and nourishing manner. I ran out of money last week so I had to resort to an emergency means of carrying out this restaurant thing. I broke out my shining new Bullocks credit card and took Auntie Catherine and Kory to Bullocks Restaurant on the corner of South Lake and San Pasqual Ave. in beautiful Pasadena.

We were seated in what looks like an old grand style ballroom in some of the most comfy chairs you could ask for. I was expecting the waitress to waltz out in a Mozart style manner. However, we were treated instead to a fashion show, which was for the older crowd there. The food was actually quite good, especially considering that I could charge it along with new towels, a tie, and assorted toiletry items. Catherine and Kory both ordered the hamburger combo which was quite scrumptious, and me being the daredevil that I am, ordered the quite exotic meatloaf special, which would have made even Granny cry with jealousy. So, If you’re shopping on South Lake and in the mood for food, come on by Bullocks and dine in style.
The Trustees are Coming,
The Trustees are Coming . . .

BY GWEN GARRISON, Christian Higher Education Student

Some of the veteran students around campus noticed right away the tell-tale signs that the Trustees of Fuller are going to make their annual fall quarter visit. And I am sure it did not take long for the new students to figure out what the sprucing up of the campus greenery entails. The Board of Trustees will come to our campus Sunday, November 1, and will stay until Tuesday, November 3, participating in various committee meetings and the installation of Dr. J. Dudley Woodberry as Dean of the School of World Mission.

Some of you might be wondering who the Trustees are and why are they so important to the life of Fuller. As a student in Fuller’s new Christian Higher Education program, I’ve had the privilege of learning how higher education works and the model that governs most institutions.

Since the beginning of higher education some 300 years ago in this country, an institution was established through a written charter, similar to a constitution. These charters are legally binding agreements between the official operators of the institution and the public they serve. Their primary goal is to spell out the existence and purpose of the institution in which they exist.

Furthermore, the charter identifies the people responsible for all the activities of the institution. And unlike what most of people understand, those responsible for the actions of the institution are a governing board called the Trustees. In other words, the institution is entrusted to the care of a group of people, as opposed to one person like the president or chancellor.

Who are these people? Typically, Boards of Trustees of higher education institutions are made up of community members: doctors, teachers, lawyers, business professionals, and homemakers. Often they act as the eyes and ears of the institution outside of the community. They are able to bring the community concerns into consideration so that the education of the institution will also reflect the needs of the community they serve. One of the Board’s primary responsibilities is to hire an individual to implement the policies they have created for the institution. This president or chancellor becomes the vehicle of communication between the activities of the Board and the campus at large, including students, staff, faculty, alumni, and other constituents.

Fuller Theological Seminary is proud to welcome its 30 plus member Board to our main campus. Our Board is unique because it is an unusually dedicated group who deeply believe in Fuller’s ministry to the church and the world. As Joyce Penido, a 20 year veteran of the Fuller Board, said, “For many of us, next to our families, Fuller is the most important activity we do to serve our community.”

Resume Writing Workshop 11/9-10

Lots of practical advice and examples will be given those seeking permanent jobs after they graduate in church or psychology related positions. Information applicable to part-time, local and internship seekers as well. Students, spouses and staff are welcome to attend. Please bring your resume if you have one. Monday, November 9, 6 to 7pm in Faculty Commons or Tuesday, November 10, 10 to 11am in Payton 101B.

City Official to Visit Fuller 11/10

On November 10, from 11:30am to 1pm, the Peace and Justice Committee and the School of Theology will sponsor a Brown Bag Lunch with Pasadena City Councilperson, Chris Holden. This dialogue will be held in the SOP Conference Room on the 1st floor. All are welcome. Come discuss with us Fuller's relationship to the city and urban issues.

Grow with C.B.F.M.S. 11/11

Discuss your dreams or creative ideas with Personnel Director, Glenn Kendall in the Garth on Wednesday, November 11. Through innovation, teamwork and integrity, your ministry horizons can be expanded with the Conservative Baptist Foreign Mission Society.

Outside Our Comfort Zones 11/12

The Threefold Call: “I think most of us are looking for a calling, not a job...Jobs are not big enough for people.” (Worker interviewed by Studs Terkel). Are you called to Fuller or did you just happen to see an ad in Christianity Today? How does calling relate to marriage, family, singleness; politics and how you vote? How does it relate to God as Father, Son and Holy Spirit? How does calling relate to one’s identity? Please join us Thursday, November 12, Payton 101 at 7pm.

Daily Orthodox Morning Prayers

DISCERNING YOUR CALL:
A PANEL PRESENTATION
11/16

Have you ever wondered about the issue of calling to ministry? How you discern God’s call in your life? On Monday November 16, from 7pm - 9pm, in Travis Auditorium, the Offices of Christian Community and Career Services will present a panel discussion on “Discerning Your Call.” Panel members include: Dr. Stanley B. Long, Fuller Trustee, Interim Director of the African-American Minister’s Program and Pastor in Fremont; Dr. Mitties McDonald DeChamplain, Fuller Professor; Judith Durf, Minister in La Canada; and John Wierick, movie and television writer and Board Member of the Hollywood Urban Project. Panel members will share insights growing out of their respective journeys.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT FOR MINISTRY
11/19

You can receive income for your ministry through Student Ministries Inc. SMI is a mission agency that enables graduate students to develop support from various sources. It issues tax-deductible receipts to donors and monthly compensation checks to the students. Dr. George Till, Executive Director of SMI will be on campus Thursday, November 19, from 8am to 1pm. Stop by the Garth at the SMI display table to learn how you can be supported in your ministry.

ATTENTION PSYCHOLOGY AND PASTORAL COUNSELING STUDENTS

The Fuller and Pasadena Chapter of the Christian Association for Psychological Studies (CAPS) is reorganizing for this academic year. We are seeking three additional students to serve on the steering committee, one from each of the following programs: Clinical Ph. D., Psy. D. and M. Div. Pastoral Counseling. Interested persons should call David Wheeler (MFT Rep) at 818-568-3401 and leave a message. Watch the SEMI for additional announcements of chapter activities.

ADVANCED PREACHING SEMINAR

Applications for the Winter '93 Seminar with Professor Ian Pitt-Watson are now available in the Preaching Office.

NEW SOT COURSE
Professor Young Lee Hertig will be teaching a new course entitled “Asian-American Ministry” GM573 in the Winter '93 quarter. This course will address the issues regarding the expanding needs of the growing Asian-American population. Important issues such as identity, leadership styles, worship expression, theology, and mission will be discussed, challenged and processed. The class will be offered on Monday nights from 7pm to 9:50pm. There is no pre-requisite for this course and it is an elective. We hope you will take advantage of this opportunity and sign up for this rewarding new course. For any questions, please see your Academic Advisor.

ATTENTION MARRIED COUPLES
Cliff and Joyce Penner have generously donated copies of their video series on sex. Married couples may check these out for 2 day intervals from the Office of Christian Community at no charge. They are: “The Act Of Making Love;” “Discoveries Uniquely Hers;” “His Struggles;” “How to Keep the Spark Alive.” Interested? Call 584-5322.

ATTENTION FULLER WOMEN
Women’s Concerns meetings will be held in the back room of the Catalyst every Wednesday from 5pm to 6pm. Come and share in the communal story of women at Fuller.

MEN’S GROUP
Announcing a free weekly leaderless Men’s Group on campus! As a support group, it is based in the Office of Christian Community. If you are interested in getting together with other men to talk about relationships, feminism or whatever, drop a note with preferred times you can meet to Box OCC - Men’s Group.

NO YEARBOOK, NO PICTORIAL DIRECTORY!

As of this Fall Quarter (1992), neither a 1992-93 yearbook nor a Pictorial Directory of students, staff, and faculty, will be published in any form this year. Both of these publications have become key tools for reference and community building over the last several years.

Last Spring, the Budget Committee of the All Seminary Council, the office that has published a yearbook for the last three consecutive years, decided that it was not fair to the students to use so much of their “Student Fees-ASC” money to subsidize the cost of printing. Either this expense would have to be picked up by an office of the Administration or a smaller, soft-bound version would have to suffice. One option was to combine the Yearbook and the Pictorial Directory into one publication that would attempt to serve both purposes.

However, it came to the attention of the ASC this Fall that the Registrar’s Office would no longer be printing the Pictorial Directory. Consequently, all photo-taking of students - except Polaroid shots which are usable only for I. D. cards, has been terminated. As of this Fall, there will be absolutely no comprehensive photographic record of the students, staff, and faculty that pass through Fuller each year.

Not only is this a disappointment for Fullerites trying to put names to faces and for graduates who have always looked forward to a book of memoirs when leaving this community, but a written and photographed chronicle of the years ahead will be missing. If anyone wants to remember who was at Fuller and what the campus was like in the mid-90s, they will have to resort to the selective memory of those who were there. If the loss of these two publications affects you, please let the ASC office know of your concern.

INTERESTED IN FORMING A COMMUNITY OF CELEBRATION?
This community (small group) would be composed of performing and visual artists, composers, directors, writers, etc. who seek to present creative celebrations with music-drama for chapels/churches. If interested call Jim Speck (818) 577-4810, or FTS Box 173.

L.A. PHILHARMONIC — FREE!
The ASC has a limited number of free tickets to various performances of the L.A. Philharmonic Orchestra’s 1992-93 Winter Season available for students. Come to the ASC Office, 9am-12, 1-4pm, Monday-Thursday for this incredible offer NOW!

WHAT QUESTIONS STILL LINGER?
WHAT ISSUES STILL BOTHER YOU AFTER THE L.A. CRISIS?
As a follow up of the L.A. Crisis, a forum will be held in which a multi-ethnic panel of church leaders and professors will address issues and concerns among the students. We are committed to provide a safe place for students to ask questions by asking you to anonymously submit your questions prior to the forum in the boxes (located around campus) marked MC.

We strongly encourage participation of ALL students—White and People of color. Look for the MC boxes and submit your questions by November 13th. Sponsored by the MultiCultural Concerns Committee and the ASC.

WHAT’S COOKIN’ AT THE LUNCH TABLE?
Tuesday, November 3rd meet at noon in the Refectory for a Focus on the Philippines. (Light lunch provided. Please bring your own drinks.) If you need more information about this Tuesday or other ISCC lunches, please call (818) 584-5454.

DRAM, MEGABYTES, MEGAHERTZ!!
Do these words confuse you when looking at computer ads or when in a computer store? Help has arrived! Come join Eric Folbrocht, a professional computer programmer with a degree in Computer Science, as he explains these terms and what to look for when purchasing a computer. He will also share insights about the latest technology within IBM compatible computers. The seminar will be held November 5th, at 7:30 pm in the library classroom #204.

INTRODUCING...
THE BERKELEY HOUSE!
(What do you mean you don’t know about the Berkeley House?) The Berkeley House is a new community house of five Fuller women, more formally known as Amanda, Cheryl, Dawn, Maria and Luann. And since we’re being formal, we’re formally inviting you to...a...well...call it a grand opening, call it an open house, call it a really good time, but you won’t want to miss our introductory party to the Fuller Community on Friday, November 6th. Festivities will begin around 8:00pm. So bring a plant, dress as a plant, or think of a plant, but be sure to plant yourself in our living room (not permanently mind you) for a great night of music, movin’, and munchin’. The ASC will be providing food so all you need to do is bring your own beverage. See you there! Oh...you want directions? The address is 80 S. Berkeley Avenue. If you are coming from Fuller, travel East on Colorado. Berkeley Avenue is one set of lights past Allen. Turn right on Berkeley and #80 is a yellow house on the lefthand side.
