Dr. Bill Pannell has a vision. As the new Dean of Chapel, he sees his role as something beyond organizing the Wednesday 10 a.m. gathering; he sees something more like a whole ministry of spirituality. His hope is to redefine and extend the Chapel office into one that takes responsibility for the spiritual enhancement of the seminary community.

One weekly, voluntary hour of chapel cannot be expected to meet student’s spiritual needs. Yet, the question may be asked, “Is a seminary really responsible for its students’ spiritual growth?” According to the new Dean of Chapel, Fuller is beginning to say “Yes!” with more conviction than ever before.

Pannell recognizes that seminary is a very difficult time for students spiritually. In some respects, this is a difficult time for spirituality in all of American Christianity. He sees in the Church lethargy, nominalism, and spiritual dullness. But, he also senses a common yearning to know God, with an accompanying feeling that “something’s wrong.” Pannell has an idea of what’s wrong. “The American Church leadership and membership is not suffering from lack of programs, but from lack of character... God’s people are looking for leadership to move with God.” Fuller has the opportunity to prepare new generations of leaders with character to lead God’s people into deeper relationship with God.

Pannell would be the first to admit that a program at Fuller for spiritual development is of such magnitude that it needs an institutional commitment. Pannell talks of a mandate from the new Fuller leadership for the community to proceed in the development of varied spiritual ministries. The seminary, he says, “is in a different place now than ever before for spiritual development... A lifetime commitment of Fuller’s has matured.” Spiritual development is an essential aspect in the restructuring and long-term planning going on at the highest levels of the seminary currently. He believes that his hope is shared by seminary leadership that “over the next several years Fuller will be able to confidently encourage potential students to attend Fuller for outstanding academics and also for exposure to the disciplines of spirituality which will enhance their Christian character throughout their lives.”

As far as the Wednesday chapel services, Pannell is trying to change the focus and purpose of the gatherings. Chapel at Fuller seemed to Pannell to have become a “who’s speaking?” kind of event where students evaluate their options for the one hour a week gathering. Pannell feels the challenge to change that kind of attitude about chapel. “It betrays the fundamental understanding of community,” he says. “The Bible says, ‘Forsake not the assembling of yourselves.’ That’s the charge. Not style or main attractions, but just that we get together because we need each other.”

Given the busy lifestyles, scattered priorities, and multiple time and energy demands for students and faculty, changing this kind of thinking is going to be quite a challenge. Can Pannell promote chapel as a way of expressing our commitment to one another in a more radical way than an “event-oriented, ‘who’s-speaking’ personality cult”? “This kind of entertainment-thinking is so American, it’s hard to beat.” He says he’s ready for the challenge, though.

This year is somewhat of a transition year for Dr. Pannell. His plans for Chapel services include offering the community a worship experience that considers and integrates the plurality of traditions and cultures represented on campus. He is gathering together a team of people which reflects this diversity who will lead worship. He hopes that maybe by next fall, the community will see the fruits of their efforts. Among the ideas for getting people involved in Chapel leadership is by offering a course on worship, internships in worship, or maybe even paid positions in worship leadership. All of these ideas and more are being discussed and considered over the course of this year. Meanwhile, he feels he can “reasonably guarantee a good worship time together.” He wants the Chapel service to be a place where we can have confidence that God will meet us.
Brother Jiali Wang was born in Shanghai and grew up in this most industrial and commercial city of China. During the Cultural Revolution (1966-1976), he was sent to labor in the countryside. When the Cultural Revolution was over, he went to Beijing Normal University and majored in English literature. Wang came to know the Lord Jesus Christ and his future wife in his college years. In 1989 he came to the United States and studied at Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary, Evanston, Illinois. In 1991 he transferred to Fuller Theological Seminary and now is in the doctoral program in the School of World Mission.

Wang does evangelistic work among the immigrants from China and has organized a congregation in Monterey Park. The congregation has grown from two (Wang and his wife) in the summer of 1992 to more than twenty people in early November. The immigrants have come from all over China and have diverse educational backgrounds. Many of them can barely make a living of survival. Coming from a society under the Communist rule for more than forty years, they need special pastoral care and healing. In his pioneering situation, Wang has gradually developed a pastoral and mission theology. Evangelism, pastoring and reflection on the future of the Chinese churches occupy his mind day and night.

Wang has a vision to establish churches for the immigrants from China. He accepts the "homogeneous church" thesis elaborated by Donald McGavran and Peter Wagner. Wang points to the need for the Chinese immigrants to have their own church. Many church leaders in the Chinese community in Los Angeles disagree with Wang. They think the proper way is to absorb the immigrants into the existing churches which consist mainly of people from Taiwan and Hong Kong.

Wang does not like to argue with the leaders in the established Chinese churches about how the church growth principles should be applied. He found them unable to understand the culture and feelings of the immigrants from China. To be loyal to his calling and vision, Wang spent many hours on evangelism among the Chinese immigrants. He enjoys being with them. From his ministry, he found that his own relationship with God improved greatly. He believes that he, himself, may have received the greatest benefit from his ministry. He has experienced the power of God who resurrected Jesus, and has come to a deeper understanding of the Bible. Wang thinks his personal spiritual growth arises mostly from difficulties in ministry. In time of ministerial troubles he is forced to depend on God for support and on the Bible for truth. "The power of Christ," he says, "is made perfect in a minister's weakness, not in one's strength."

Wang has made every effort to contextualize his message to this congregation, who have a traditional Chinese mindset and were under the Communist propaganda of atheism for most of their lives. His effort bears fruits. He has seen his countrymen come to know God in Jesus Christ. "Before they know Christ, they do not find meaning for their lives. Through faith and the forgiveness of sins they can readjust their lives to God. Some come out from despair. Broken families are healed. Now in Christ, many couples can have a new family relationship. The gospel is God's power for a new life."

Wang is working in a motel in South Central Los Angeles and experiences the urban life there. Whenever he can, he preaches to the drug addicts and prostitutes that come to the motel at night. Meanwhile, he hopes to have some financial support so that he can devote more time in ministry and studies.

Studying hard at Fuller and praying for his country and people, Brother Jiali Wang has a great hope for the Christian Church in China. God has created 1.1 billion Chinese, among them only about fifty million are Christians. China needs at least one million pastors and evangelists in the near future. Wang knows that the Lord Jesus Christ will answer his prayer: "Send out the worker, my Lord, my God."
WHAT WE DO BEHIND THE SCENES

It is unfortunate that so much of what the ASC does for students does not appear on posters, master calendars, or SEMI announcements. The fruit of a lot of our work surfaces in little-noticed policy-changes, in committee proposals, and in Administrative choices that may not affect the campus this term or even this year. However, this does not mean that you, the students, should not know what we are advocating for. The following is a tentative list (tentative because we never know what may come up later on in the year) of those seminary-wide items which the ASC has already begun to deal with and for which we hope to make substantial strides by June of 1993.

1. Reduce rate of tuition increase.
2. Increase Grant-In-Aid money.
3. Improve pastoral care.
4. Define ethnic diversity.
6. Provide recreation on campus.
7. Reduce ASC Student Fees.
8. Reduce xerox copy price.

For a more detailed description of each of these goals, check out our memorandum to students which will be posted on the Board of Declarations during the 10th and 11th weeks of the quarter. Any comments, questions, critiques, praises, etc? Just stop on by the ASC office.

As a postscript, the ASC, on behalf of the student body, would like to publicly express our gratitude to our Seminary President for sharing from his heart at the President's Convocation on November 17th. Coming from our chief executive, the “personal comments” showed us that the pain caused by John Finch and the systemic problems he inadvertently uncovered affected not only the student body, but the administration as well. Thank you, Dr. Hubbard.

FINANCIAL AID NEWS

Starting in the Winter quarter a Federal Loan will be available to students who normally don’t qualify for the Stafford Loan. The new “Unsubsidized Stafford Loan” is similar to the other Stafford (GSL) in every respect except that the borrower is responsible to pay all of the interest that accrues on the loan. In other words, the government does not subsidize the loan when you are in school. Eligible students can borrow up to $7500 less any subsidized Stafford loan money. The interest rate is variable, topping out at 9%.

THE CHATTANOOGA CHRISTIAN FOUNDATION is offering scholarships of up to $5000 annually for the duration of a degree program. Dining With Dan

GREEN STREET RESTAURANT ★★★★ OUT OF FIVE

Hi, I’m Dan your co-dependent mailman, back again this week to tantalize you with my latest dining discovery. Thanks to my good friend, Jim Taggart, I can lead you to this wonderful nite spot located at 146 Shoppers Lane behind the Crocodile Cafe on South Lake Avenue. The name of this little gem is the Green Street Restaurant and if you’re watching your dining dollar but want to have some fun once-in-a-while then this is the place to be. Every Thursday night from 4:30-7:30 p.m. they offer free appetizers and entertainment from one of the best magicians in the world. His name is Johnny Ace Palmer and he is truly amazing and a born-again Christian to boot. Stuff your tummy with free yummies. The appetizers are great and free with a purchase of any drink. (Tea and soda included.) They offer cheese-chicken chimichangas, chicken wings, delicious sausage, cheese sticks, fresh fruit and homemade potato chips to name a few. Please note that you will have to be seated in the bar area for this offer (so bringing children is not advised) unless you’re prepared to shell out a generous portion of your tithe to eat in the restaurant. Just kidding. So, anyway, come on down, eat some great appetizers, see some awesome magic and tell Johnny Ace Palmer that Dan sent you (from Fuller) before he makes me disappear.

Dear Gregory:

I have a friend who has been hurt in a relationship. I see and feel the hurt. I also see how the enemy is using the hurt to keep my friend in a defeated position, and blinded to the work of the enemy. I want to share with my friend how I see the enemy working, but I do not know if this message will be received as truth. I want to express my love, acceptance and understanding to my friend, but it seems the doors are closed prohibiting such communication. How do I, in God’s love, reach out to my friend without further closing the doors on our relationship?

A True Friend

Dear True Friend:

It appears, from your letter, that you have thought this out thoroughly. Maybe you could first send a letter to your friend and then see if there is room for dialogue. Or, you could just ask your friend if you can sit down and talk for a while in private.

If you choose to chat, I suggest that you write out your thoughts first to see that you have a workable order for communication with your friend. You could start out with just what you’ve said in your letter to me that you are “…reaching out in love…” and that you “…don’t want to close any doors on your relationship…” in the process.

With regard to the word “truth”, in your letter, you may want to re-word that as “perception” instead. One person’s truth can be another person’s folly. With regard to your “feeling” the hurt of a friend, you may want to search that out. Sometimes we mistake feelings of compassion for the “feeling” of someone else’s pain.

True friendship, like true love, has an element of toughness at times. When we are willing to take risks, like putting our friendships on the line by speaking our minds, we are generally the better for it and our friendships become more “real”. So go for it, just like you wrote it and continue to be a “True Friend”.

GREGORY
Pasadena is a great place to be for the holidays! Here’s an updated re-run from last year with some great ideas for fun festivities...

If you are going to be in Pasadena after finals, there are many wonderful HOLIDAY CELEBRATIONS in the area. Don’t miss the annual lights decorations on the towering deodar pines of Christmas Tree Lane (Santa Rosa St.) in Altadena or the amazingly bedecked Balian Mansion with enough lights to make even Edison squint. The Upper Hastings area of NE Pasadena has traditionally gone all out with decorations, even instituting competitions between streets. While this has gone downhill in the last few years, it is still enjoyable and might be visited along with a quick stop at the Living Nativity scene that the First Nazarene Church puts on.

Glendale Center Theater annually presents Dicken’s “Christmas Carol.” This delightful production is presented “in the round” with the audience practically on stage. Another production to consider is the Crystal Cathedral’s “Glory of Christmas” presentation with live animals, pageantry, music, and angels flying 80 feet overhead. Call (714) 54-GLORY for more info. Westminster Presbyterian Church, the large gothic cathedral on N. Lake, presents a free drive-through Nativity scene Dec. 19-20 (7-10 pm) in their back parking lot complete with live animals and actors. This church is right around the corner from Christmas Tree Lane, so don’t miss this when you go to see the lights. For those of you who love to sing, the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion at the Music Center in L. A. has a “Messiah” sing-along (there is a participation fee). Finally, to round out your holiday experience, you might consider visiting one of the innumerable convalescent homes in Pasadena to sing carols or bring flowers and cookies. While representing the joy of Christ’s birth, the holidays can also be one of the most painful times of the year for the lonely and disenchanted.

The big cahuna for Pasadena is NEW YEAR’S DAY with both the Rose Parade and Rose Bowl Game. If you’re around, it’s great fun to participate in the float decorating process. Sierra Madre, La Canada, Alhambra, and other cities in the area regularly enter floats into the parade, so you might consider calling your local city government office or the Pasadena Rose Parade Association to get info on how you can join in the petal-gluing and flower-affixing. Thousands of folks sleep out on the parade route on New Year’s Eve to “secure a viewing spot” for the next day. This typically doesn’t work, but is nevertheless lots of fun (not very restful, though).

If you’d prefer your own bed but don’t want to miss out on the all-city NEW YEAR’S EVE party, you might consider walking the route at night. It’s almost six miles, so arrange to have your car at the other end or midway if you tire easily. The parade route goes from Orange Grove Blvd., down Colorado, and up Sierra Madre Blvd. Post-parade, the floats are usually parked on Sierra Madre Blvd. for several days to allow for closer viewing.

Other holiday notes: Glen Ivy Hot Springs has a 2-for-1 special between Thanksgiving and Christmas with a CLUB MUD discount card (available at the Psychology Graduate Union office). For the price of a movie, you can enjoy pools, Jacuzzis, mineral baths, a mud pool, and hundreds of lounge chairs for either pre-finals study or post-finals recuperation. It’s one hour southeast of Pasadena in Corona. Finally, don’t miss out on the price-slashing post-Christmas sales in the area. I’m not much of a shopper, but even I get excited about the 50-75% savings on quality items in the South Lake shopping district and on ribbons and such at STATS on Fair Oaks. It’s a great way to get next year’s Christmas presents at prices starving students can afford.
