Biography

Best known for her popular Personal Evangelism courses, Frances McClelland Ure (1890-1987) was born in Allegheny, now the Northside section of Pittsburgh, in 1890 to Walter Ure, a Scottish immigrant and his wife Margaret Grove Ure. She was the younger of two sisters who survived out of the six children. During the Civil war her father had been appointed as Assistant Surgeon of United States Volunteers by President Lincoln. By the time of Frances' birth he was a prominent physician in Pittsburgh. The family attended the 4th Presbyterian Church in Northside.

At the age of twenty-three she committed her life to the Lord through the personal evangelism of Dr. S.M. Zwemer, a Dutch Reformed Missionary. Ms. Ure received her theological training from Washington Seminary, completing her program there in 1910.

She was ordained as a pastor in the church which she established on Long Island, Farmingdale Gospel Church, a branch of the Pittsburg Bible Institute. There was a mention at her farewell when she left Farmingdale that she would be going as a missionary to Belgian Congo for five years. The Pittsburgh Gazette Times October 29th 1926 carries her photograph, which is titled Missionaries.

Returned from missionary service in the Belgian Congo, she took up her primary ministry - training in personal evangelism. She taught classes for Sunday school teachers in many Assemblies of God and Open Bible Standard Churches, specializing in Personal Evangelism. She was a well-recognized teacher in this field, highly recommended by many prominent ministers and traveled all over the country offering her courses.

She composed a collection of poems called 'Stars in the Night,' as well as Biblical choruses which she used in her personal evangelism classes.

Scope and Content

The papers of Frances Ure (1890-1987) provide insight into the role of women in the Pentecostal movement. Ure grew up in Pittsburgh and received her theological training from Washington Female Seminary in 1910. She was converted through the ministry of Dr. S.M. Zweemer, a Dutch Reformed Missionary. She established a congregation on Long Island and became its pastor. She also served as pastor of Farmingdale Gospel Church, which was a branch of the Pittsburgh Bible Institute. Later she left that ministry in order develop teacher training classes. She taught classes for Sunday school teachers in many Assemblies of God and Open Bible Standard Churches.

The collection of this itinerant Pentecostal evangelist includes teaching outlines, sermons notes, church bulletins, advertisements of upcoming meetings, poems (a few of which are published), financial and medical records. Also part of the collection are the wartime correspondence and military medals of Ure's father, Walter Ure, who served in the Union Army as a physician during the Civil War.
