Lord of the Classroom

How does God fit in with our academic pursuits?

by Richard J. Mouw,
President of Fuller

Several years ago I spoke at a retreat for Christian university students. I was met at the airport by one of the students, whose assignment it was to drive me to the retreat site. As he drove he told me how eager he was to attend this retreat. “I have been doing nothing for several months but study, study, study!” he told me. “I have been so wrapped up with the books that I haven’t had any time for the things of the Lord.”

I knew what he meant, and I was able to offer him my sympathy. The life of the scholar (student or teacher) can be very demanding. The academic calendar is crowded with deadlines; as soon as one three-hour exam is over, you have to start worrying about the twenty-page paper due in two weeks. I love the academic life; I cannot imagine doing anything that would be more rewarding. But in the midst of my sympathy, I still worry when I hear someone like my friend from the university draw a stark contrast between academic pursuits and the “things of the Lord.” I can put my objection quite simply: the things that occupy us in the academic setting are themselves the “things of the Lord.” If I could rephrase his complaint for him with more theological precision, I would put it this way: “I have been so wrapped up with the books that I haven’t had any time for some of the other things of the Lord.”

Jesus is Lord over the “stuff” of our academic pursuits: books, term papers, quizzes, laptops, dissertations, class discussions. He is Lord of these things even where his Lordship is not acknowledged. When a group of professed atheists write learned papers about topics in molecular biology, they are dealing with the “things of the Lord,” even if they refuse to acknowledge the fact that their minds, the paper they write on, the cells that they study, the electricity that powers their computers—all these things were created by God and were designed to bring him glory and honor.

At Fuller Seminary, we know who owns the “stuff” of academic life. And we know that he calls us to serve him by the renewing of our minds: teaching and learning, studying and discussing, researching and debating—all of these can be important ways of honoring our Lord, and of proving our call to serve him.

We also know, of course, that there is more to the Kingdom of God than academic pursuits. My friend was right to recognize the need for praying and singing hymns and sharing testimonies and walking in the woods. God wants us to engage in these things, and especially when we are in the middle of our seminary studies. The Lord desires more than academic excellence. But he does not desire less than academic excellence. Fuller Seminary is a rich and complex place. This is the way it should be. But at the heart of all we do is God’s call to work at the renewing of our minds so that the Body of Christ might be strengthened for its manifold ministries. May this be a year when we devote much intellectual and spiritual energy to the “things of the Lord.”

Dr. Mouw – conference speaker extraordinaire and president of Fuller.
ora et labora [work and prayer]

And Jesus increased in wisdom.... Luke 2:52
Let the same mind be in you that was in Christ Jesus.... Philippians 2:5
...be transformed by the renewing of your mind... Romans 12:2

by Barbara L. Eurich-Rascoe, Director of Women's Concerns

A call to study is not a call away from other tasks. Most come to seminary with many roles, one labeled “student.” Each will continue as “friend,” “worker,” “daughter,” “son.” Many will continue as “wife,” “husband,” “father,” “mother,” “pastor,” “counselor,” “missionary.” Surely, all will continue as “Christ-followers,” “worshippers,” “pray-ers.” What can it mean—called by God: “student”? When I became a lay member of a monastery, I began to be transformed in the doing of prayer and work. My relationship to study (intellectual work) changed: No longer could work be antithetical to life with God. Rather, study had to become life with God, God, through the “show and tell” of the monks, required the surrender of my intellect to God’s loving will.

In ten weeks of work and prayer, I did not complete the task. I barely—but truly—began.

I determined to pray with the monks all five times—every day—when they gathered in the chapel to chant the Psalms and receive communion. My only work was the dissertation—about five 20-page papers, plus introduction and conclusion. No mean task, certainly, but not so very hard.

During those 10 weeks, something strange began to happen to me. God confronted me in the terrifying work of deliberate, disciplined prayer, and God embraced me in the consoling prayer of deliberate, disciplined work. Immersion in the monastic tradition of ora et labora led me to the painful, taxing work of study, and (more important to my goal) to the deepening, comforting prayer of research.

The two (work and prayer), juxtaposed in the monks’ daily rhythm, opened my soul: I was overwhelmed by fear of success and failure; I was shocked by my idolatry of persons, particularly the dissertation committee. I was stunned by what I knew; I marveled at ways my knowledge became an authentic new thing of its own. I became resentful of burdens in the form of people who needed me (as they must whenever space and time are shared). I became grateful for gifts in the form of people who supplied my needs (family and friends simply left me alone, though they needed my attention).

All Seminary Council: What’s it About?

by Meg O’Brien
ASC President

I’d like to take this opportunity to welcome both new and returning students to the Fuller Campus. The All Seminary Council (ASC) is a body of students, elected to represent the diversity of the student body to the institution of Fuller. We are elected by the Associated Students of Fuller Theological Seminary (ASFTS) (in other words – You, the student body).

As your voice, we on the ASC are intent upon fulfilling our purpose of serving you, the student, by speaking to the Fuller community about your needs, hopes, and visions. We acknowledge that we are funded by the students and we desire to follow Christ’s example by being your servants. The ASC embraces the diversity of the Fuller Community and seeks to promote services and activities which encourage spiritual growth, genuine community, and academic excellence in celebration of that diversity.

I’d like to introduce you to the All Seminary Council members for this year. The Administrative part of the ASC is made up of a President and a Vice-President, who were elected in the Spring by the entire student body to lead the ASFTS and ASC, as well as to develop and maintain the relationship between the ASFTS and the trustees, administration, and faculty of Fuller Theological Seminary. Their Cabinet is made up of the President and Vice-President, as well as people appointed by them to various administrative and service-coordinator positions.

Students from each of the three schools elect a President and Vice-President to represent them on the ASC and to lead their Graduate Union (MFT and Clinical Psychology elect two Co-Presidents). The Graduate Union leaders represent the students of their schools to the Faculty, Staff and Administration of those schools.

Keith Lee TGU President
Trudy Dumont TGU Vice-President

School of World Mission Graduate Union

Keng-Hua (Peter) Ng SWMGUI President
Myoungsun Kim SWMGUI Vice-President

Psychology Graduate Union

Jay Shetler PGU Clinical Co-President
Cynthia Cooley PGU MFT Co-President

There are six Concerns Committees on campus, and a Chair is elected from among their members to represent them on the ASC and to lead the committee. Each Concerns Committee works to raise awareness of students, faculty, and administration regarding its area of concern, as well as working to meet needs of students in that area.

We encourage you to utilize and contribute to the ASC by voicing your concerns, needs, hopes, and visions to the Council, participating in ASC events, and joining and supporting Concerns Committees and Graduate Unions.

Our Vision:

The ASC’s theme for the 1996-97 school year is based on the Biblical concept of Sabbath. It is our goal to challenge, encourage, and model what it means to lead a healthy lifestyle as a student, balancing study and work with rest and play. We see this as a matter of reprioritizing our lives – giving rest and play a key role in all that we do. It is our desire to see the Fuller Community, institutionally and individually, work towards this goal. We look forward to working with you and serving you this year.

In returning and rest you shall be saved; in quietness and in trust shall be your strength. Isaiah 30:15b.

For more than 30 years, the School of Psychology at Fuller Theological Seminary has been a pioneer in providing committed Christians with the finest professional training in clinical psychology and marriage and family therapy within a context of faith and theological understanding. As the first program of its kind, we have a proud tradition of innovation and service to the church and the helping professions. More than 1,200 SOP graduates serve around the world, bringing restoration and reconciliation to broken lives and relationships through writing, research, teaching, administration, and direct clinical service.

This is an exciting time of transition and recommitment for the faculty, staff, and students of the SOP. Recent changes in the role of mental health services in the church and dramatic restructuring in the health care industry have presented new challenges for effectively preparing tomorrow’s professionals. During the months ahead, we will be reflecting on our role in equipping the future leaders of the church, endeavoring to find new ways to bring psychological education to every Fuller Seminary student. We will also be exploring how to bring all that we know about human behavior and relationships to church and para-church organizations around the world. Our commitment to integration of theory, faith, and practice is stronger than ever, and we will be considering new ways to explicitly anchor all that we do within a context of ministry and service, maintaining the highest standards of scholarship and expertise along with a passionate desire for transforming the spiritual lives of our students.

I am proud to be a member of the Fuller community! This is an exciting place, where innovation and change are woven through a rich tradition of scholarship and evangelism. Our diversity, international perspective, and intellectual depth combine to make Fuller a “one of a kind” institution. As the SOP moves toward an exciting new chapter in its development, it is our desire to serve the entire seminary in creative new ways.

Please come by my office or stop me on campus to introduce yourself or share your thoughts and suggestions. I will look forward to talking with you!

The new year gives us a wonderful opportunity to make a fresh start and try new things. What new things would I like to see us try out this year? First, I think the results of the Communicorp study give us the opportunity to listen to members of our community who feel they have not been heard, and to do a better job of being Christ’s people together. Second, I think the current leadership team is determined to do a better job of working together as three schools, as extensions and main campus, as people from many different cultures and denominations. Finally, I think the new year, with its new faculty and new students, gives us a great opportunity to praise the Lord for the many blessings we enjoy at Fuller: its glorious diversity, its creativity, and, especially, its potential.

In order to promote open communication, I have established “Open Hours” beginning the week of September 23, 1996. From 11 a.m. – 12 noon on Tuesdays and from 3 p.m. – 4 p.m. on Thursdays my door will be “open” to anyone wanting to meet with me without an appointment on any subject of concern, on a “first-come/first-served” basis. While this time has been arranged with students in mind, staff and faculty are also welcome to take advantage of these open hours. The only exceptions to this rule (due to holidays or other engagements) will be October 17, 22, November 5, 26, and 28. Anyone interested should come during the above-mentioned hours to the Dean’s Office, Payton Hall, Room 216.

We welcome you to what promises to be a very exciting year. First, we have two new SWM faculty members who make it possible to expand our offerings. Eddie Gibbs returns to our faculty as Professor of Church Growth after serving at All Saints Episcopal Church in Beverly Hills. This not only will allow us to deal more adequately with challenges in the mainline denominations but frees Peter Wagner to expand our program in Colorado Springs.

Timothy Park joins our faculty as Associate Professor of Asian Mission after serving as the President of the Presbyterian Seminary in the Philippines. He will not only help us deal more adequately with the issues facing the burgeoning third-world missions but also strengthen our partnership with Chongshin University and Seminary, where he will teach in the spring.

Orbis Press has just published a new book entitled Missiological Education for the 21st Century, edited by SWM faculty. Building on this, we are engaged in a major curriculum review this year, to which students are invited to contribute.

Two partnerships which we have just launched include a consortium of Scandinavian schools and agencies, for which Charles Kraft just lectured at the University of Copenhagen. Also, Arthur Glasser just represented us at the University of Beijing, which has invited Fuller along with other schools to help in developing a Department of Religious Studies.

Reports from faculty and student travels this summer bring stories of evangelistic breakthroughs that God is bringing about through our graduates. These are exciting days, and we are glad you are here to share them with us.

- Native American
You must also enroll for 24 units between the Summer ’95 and Spring ’96. You cannot be a previous recipient of the ASC Ethnic American Scholarship. If you meet all of these criteria, and you demonstrate financial need of at least $2,000, come to the Financial Aid Office to pick up an application.

In ten weeks of work and prayer, I did not complete the task. I barely—but truly—began. Completion required more: 26 weeks, 7 days a week, 14 hours a day. It was good; it was very good. God met me in study; God went with me to sleep; God stayed with me at meals; God greeted me in husband, children, friends.

The monastic Rule (48.13-18) states: “...they will devote themselves to their reading ... will receive a book from the library, and ... read it straight through .... seniors [will] see that no brother is so apathetic as to waste time or to engage in idle talk to the neglect of his reading....” Why such diligence in study (in addition to manual labor, service, and prayer)? “[We] shall run on the path of God’s commandments, our hearts overflowing with the inexpressible delight of love. Never swerving from [God’s] instructions, then, but faithfully observing his teaching:.... we shall through patience share in the sufferings of Christ that we may deserve also to share in his kingdom” (Rule, Prologue 49-50).

There are many roles and many names: parent, lover, friend. In addition, in this place and at this time, God calls each one: “student”—transformed, renewed, wise.
